

Homeowners face increased taxes

By Richard Lyle
Despite a budget "cut to the bone," Drayton Valley taxpayers will see higher taxes this year.
A bylaw setting the residential, industrial and commercial mill rates was given final reading by Town Council Thursday.

The mill rates are residential, 86 mills, up from 74 mills in 1979; industrial, 182.52 mills, from 167.71 mills; and commercial, 130.52 mills, up from 118.71 mills.

According to a schedule passed by the Town, the "typical" homeowner will be asked $800.52 this year, up from $688.15 in 1979.

Taxes which will be levied on "typical" industrial and commercial properties are $2,892.96 and $2,892.76, respectively. Last year the "typical" industrial and commercial lot rates were, respectively, $2,651.27 and $2,512.65.

"The 'homeowner' has gone up 16 mills," noted Councillor Alvin Day.
Reading $1.86 mills, the "typical" new school foundation, $9.86 mills public school, $2.86 mills separate school, $2.86 mills Meridian Foundation, 1.34 mills, ambulance services, 0.52 mills, Alberta Fireworks, 0.48 mills, in 1979 the total was $4.88 mills.
"I don't see how our mill rates could be lower than 86 mills for residential assessment and 182.52 mills for commercial," announced said Town manager William Johannessen, adding that the Town is only allowing two more mills this year for general government.
Regarding projected revenue for the Town's

$2,182,575 operating budget, Mr. Johannessen said council he was sure they were low.
Representatives of all departments have been out to the home, Mr. Johannessen told the Western Review.
Cost of providing police and fire protection has increased because of "the growing need," Mr. Johannessen said.
"Drayton Valley is a growing town, and there's a lot of expansion."
Education and debt charges account for the most increase in taxes this year, Mr. Johannessen said.
Debt charges are increased because of the rise in interest rates and the new debentures floated by the Town, Mr. Johannessen added.

RCMP begins ID program

By Sherry Kibbe
If you've ever thought about marking your vehicle for identification, now may be the time to act.
And with the help of the Drayton Valley RCMP detachment and Rocky World personnel, the task will be easier than you think.
The RCMP detachment is implementing "Operation Identification" with the help of Rocky World volunteers who will be knocking on approximately 1,000 Drayton Valley doors to discuss the information that can be gained from a vehicle's identification number and personal history.
The door-to-door campaign will begin in the middle of May and will be carried out for the next two to three months.
The Rocky World representative will also be recording house numbers.

have marked with special paint and stickers that are available, but will just give residents the postage which is refundable, says Sergeant Garry Schaefer.
The only thing they will take note of is whether homeowners mark their vehicles or not, he added.
The volunteers will be identifying themselves as Rocky World employees, and if homeowners have any doubts as to what's going on, they should speak with the police.
The information is sent to a letter of identification from Sergeant Schaefer, who checks the program to "make sure it's working."
"If the home is marked, they will be preventing theft, and this certainly helps us in future identification," he said.

County signs not frivolous

By Dale Linn
Spending $75,000 of the county's 75 anniversary grant money to set a trend of taxpayer money, according to the chairman of the county's 75 anniversary committee.
Joe Pratt told the Western Review on Thursday that the money is being used to set a trend of taxpayer money, according to the chairman of the county's 75 anniversary committee.
"I don't think you are any that the costs of such a program are prohibitive, especially when you consider that this program will benefit everyone in the county, from one end to the other," he said.
Mr. Pratt was responding to a letter sent to him by Sherry Kibbe, a copy of which was published in the April 25 issue of the Western Review.
In her letter, Mrs. Kibbe challenged Mr. Pratt to prove to her, and other county residents, exactly how the sign program would cost as much as had been estimated.
A retired sign painter, Mrs. Kibbe said that $12,500 was for two high a price to pay for "marking the county residents that point," Mr. Pratt denied this charge and stated that Mrs. Kibbe might be a little out of date on her price.

"Perhaps Mrs. Kibbe hasn't checked out the prices of these kind of things elsewhere," he said.
"We received our quotes from the same person who did the signs at the Recreation Centre, and we know exactly how long he guarantees them. It is a fairly good guarantee," Mr. Pratt added.
Each of the second road signs there will be 800 to 1,000 each, and 800 each, while the old entrance signs will cost $2,000.
The double-sided signs in front of the county office will cost $7,500.

No regulations

Non-conforming mopeds frustrating

By Sherry Kibbe
Moped, motor bike or moped—by whatever name you call them, these two-wheelers are causing headaches for the Drayton Valley RCMP detachment lately.
The problem results because of an inconsistency with regard to registration requirements, says Corporal James Schaefer.
There have been problems with persons purchasing small Yamaha products, because these vehicles don't really conform to any definite regulations under the Motor Vehicle Act, he said.
This vehicle has a four motor, but no pedals, and although it's considered by some to be a moped, it's not.

"In reality" it's a little motor bike.
If a vehicle has no pedals and is driven on a highway, which includes any road in town, it's considered a motorcycle and therefore has to be registered as such.
However, if a vehicle has pedals and can be either pedaled or motorized to operate, the regulations will depend on the type and weight of the vehicle.
Corporal Schaefer says there's been "a lot of confusion" and inconsistency with these vehicles, and some persons who are buying these "little mopeds" are often "misled."
He suggests anyone who intends to buy these motor bikes should check with the RCMP to determine the proper, accurate and classification required.

Credit card use reaches peak

The burgeoning use of credit cards seems to be reaching a crescendo, which is probably a good thing. As a result of consumer credit restrictions in many smaller businesses have already stopped accepting money and bigger retailers and hospitality related businesses are following the trend.

With high interest rates, it's only a matter of time the same thing happens in Canada.

Here are a couple of examples of belt tightening in U.S. In Florida, many major restaurants have outlawed use of cards and some franchised service station operators have even stopped accepting the plastics issued by multinational parents.

The reason for the change in policy, particularly among smaller businesses: firms accepting credit cards pay

Safety pays... thro

For years, safety personnel have been trying to find better ways of encouraging people to think "safety" both on and off the job, and away from the job, for if a person is injured, there is a financial cost to an employer. In addition to the pain, suffering and possible financial loss to the injured person.

Company effectiveness is measured, in part, by profits. It is certainly in the interests of each company to minimize accidents—regardless of all other personal considerations.

individuals, but also among some companies. A problem is that, although some major accidents have made headlines for a day or two, the majority don't rate a single line of type in a newspaper and very few even get a mention in an Internet magazine. The assumption may be that "it is bad news—we don't want that."

Your Editor:

With reference to your article, "From the On the Bear Hunter," in the Winter Review about 20 years ago the opinion that Mr. Hunter's information regarding the current situation about man-eating was based upon 18 or 19 years of experience as a hunter by Mr. Hunter, which I have known by his travels in India O' Lane, M.A., who was killed in 1926, and that there was the largest number of man-eaters recorded shall mention.

Master Charge promotes charge businesses who pay card fees as low as five per cent for the service. Naturally, smaller firms pay the highest percentages.

In addition, the financial institutions receive 21 per cent interest on accounts that aren't paid within 30 days.

Smaller Canadian businesses forced to pay card fees are promised a refund on the $18.50 per cent fee. But they are not obliged to offer the same purchases as large retailers, even if they have to pay the money out of their own pockets.

Little noticed in the debate over the use of plastics is the fact that cash customers are subsidizing the army of credit card users.

When a customer pays cash, there is no kickback to Visa or Master Charge. When a card is processed, the business loses two to six per cent on the transaction. So overall prices must be higher to maintain profitability.

Perhaps it is time Canadians took a second look at the so-called convenience of credit. They may be as highly overrated as the federal when it first began to subsidize the industry.

Council promotes safety rules

More than 250 children under 15 years of age die each year in pedestrian traffic accidents in Canada. To help reduce this toll, the Canada Safety Council developed an audio-visual road safety program with Elmer the Safety Elephant as a safety conscious character telling children to observe, among other safety rules, the following:

- Look all ways before you cross the road.
- Keep away from all parked cars.
- Play your games in a safe place.
- Walk, don't run, when you cross the road.
- Where there are no sidewalks, walk off the road, on the left, and face on-coming traffic.

The council also reminds parents to wear retro-reflective clothing or yellow, white or light colored clothing at night or during dark stormy weather in order to be seen by drivers.

Community starts trust fund to aid kidney transplant patient

By Dale Leman

A young man lies in the University of Alberta hospital at Edmonton, a dialysis machine clamping his chest three times a week.

Back home in Moon Lake, south of Drayton Valley, the friends of Steven Carnegie, 25, have started a trust fund, to help pay for the exorbitant costs involved in keeping Steven alive.

"We've set up a trust fund for Steven, at the University of Alberta, at the University of Alberta, at the University of Alberta," says Mrs. Olivea Trow, organizer of the trust fund.

Steven's problems began shortly after birth, when it was discovered that he had a blocked tube running from his kidney to his bladder.

By the time he was three years old, Steven had undergone eight operations to correct this defect, all of which were unsuccessful. Finally, faced with the possibility that Steven's condition might deteriorate, an operation was performed to run a catheter into the kidney, in order to drain the fluid from Steven's body.

DON'T PLAY WITH FIRE. IT KILLS.
Around Home

"The time has come," the Walrus said,
To talk of many things:
Of shoes—and ships—and sealing-wax—
Of cabbages—and kings—
And why the sea is boiling hot—
And whether pigs have wings—"

—Lewis Carroll

At that time, Steven was nearly four years old.

The catheter seemed to work fairly well, until about two years ago, when Steven's kidney began to break down.

For the past two years, his kidney had become increasingly diseased, and on April 28, now week ago, doctors removed Steven's kidney and placed him on the dialysis machine.

Although Steven's condition is now stable, and doctors feel a transplant will cure him, a donor kidney is not yet available, and until now, Steven will have to continue his dialysis treatment, three times a week.

His mother, Phyllis, 39, is in Edmonton with him, but because of a back ailment, she is unable to work, and her family expects an enormous financial strain.

The cannot afford accommodation in Edmonton, and is currently spending nights on the couch in the hospital, Mrs. Trow says.

Extensive tests are being carried out on Steven's brother, Larry, and his twin sister, Michelle, and there is a chance that Larry will prove to be a suitable donor, but until such time, the family needs help, Mrs. Trow says.

To this end, the Trow family, who are Jimmy confidant several years ago, is playing at a Steven Carnegie benefit dance on May 14 in the Moon Lake Hall.

"Jimmy said he wanted to do something in the way of thanking everyone who helped him, and he thinks this is a good way," Mrs. Trow says.

All proceeds of the dance will go towards the trust fund.

In addition, the Moon Lake High Club will be staging a benefit bridge on May 15. Again all proceeds go toward the fund.

Seniors and youngsters tell tales about school

Last week was an educational experience for both Drayton Valley youngsters and senior citizens.

While the town's youngsters had an opportunity to visit schools and relate their "little red school house" experiences, the seniors in turn shared their what-then, now and Drayton school arranged an exchange.

Education Week activities ranged from senior days to visiting buses and exchange lessons.

Drayton School teacher Terry Hinderich got her class involved in constructing a landscape, red, white and blue quilt, and Drayton School arranged an exchange.

The week began with the unveiling of 500 balloons from Drayton School, and ended with seniors days highlighting outposts of seniority.

Drainage to be improved

By Robert Reid

Necessary measures will be undertaken this summer to improve drainage in the West Valley Creek area as Drayton Valley Town Council has decided the administration to prepare a bylaw authorizing measures.

The measures would entail the installation of culverts to open up the southern end of the road to the West Valley park to the "restriction" as the development director Henry Dool.

The Town has also asked Associated Engineering Services Ltd. of Edmonton to include in its study of the creek certain changes to the study proposal.

As evaluation of the most feasible method of providing flood relief to protect the building and proposed residential lands.

Immediately adjacent to the creek, the study is funded by the provincial government. To date, it has cost approximately $85,000.

The upper portion of the road is to be cut and regraded. That portion, the area is used for agriculture in the remaining portion of the watershed.

Upstream two under-cuts have been dug to prevent water from their effluent into the creek.

Consultants reached by the consultants included a finding that a proposed modification development, adjacent to the creek may potentially be undesirable upon the floodplain.

As an area structure plan for approximately 1,800 acres west of Highway 23 to be made, and will be completed in the fall.

Colony Power Ltd. has purchased available water from the Saskatchewan Power Plant, located at miles west of Edmonton.

These plants will be of interest to those with hydroelectric or mechanical development experience related to pumps, transformers, valves, substations and associated equipment.

Tour gives students a taste of Europe

By Sherry Reid

About a month has passed since they went to Europe, but the 10 French Madelon High School (FMSH) students still haven't stopped talking about their spring break vacation.

"It [Europe] was well worth seeing—it learned more than we could have been a textbook," some of the members of Europe '80 said Monday.

Traveling to Europe was FMSH students Luc Beaudoin, Jim Doyle, Valérie Poirier, Betty Goss, Rick Breyer, Pam Landberg, Wayne Friesen, Jeff Robertson, Karen Schwaner and Renee Gosselin. They were accompanied by school teachers Ed Bouchard, Kent Collins, Geraldine Bouchard, Janet Brown and chaplain Andrew and Lovita Kurland.

One thing they discovered was "It [Europe] isn't like the movies," says Miss Gosselin. "The people are just ordinary."

But what impressed them most about the Europeans were their attitudes.

"It was a good trip," we learned a lot. The people were very nice when they found out we were Canadian," added Miss Bouchard.

Upon arrival in Amsterdam, after a flight from Calgary, the group was met by two guide buses. The group was accompanied by the travelers throughout the entire two-country tour.

The group traveled with a Canadian Educational Travel Agency (CETA) supplied coach to Budapest and Prague, and visits to Amsterdam, Paris and London. Students, underground networks, and the central city were the main attractions.

Large historic buildings, statues, exhibitions, streets, gardens, sidewalks, shops and markets were frequent sights during the trip.

While in Amsterdam, the students visited a wooden shoe factory, a flower farm, various museums, and Anne Frank's house, visited a museum of art, and took a canal boat trip.

In Brussels they saw the new North Atlantic Treaty Organization (NATO) building and large historic, and in Paris they visited the Louvre Museum, the Eiffel Tower, the Leaning Tower of Paris, and the Arc de Triomphe.

A side trip was made to Versailles—the made where Louis XIV lived. "That was my favorite place," says Miss Bouchard.

In Germany, the group saw the Canadian embassy and monument to the dead, and in London they visited the Parliament Building, Buckingham Palace, the London Tower, St. Paul's Cathedral, Madame Tussaud's wax museum, Hyde Park and Piccadilly Circus.

Some of the students attended Easter morning services at Westminster Abbey.

For some of the members of Europe '80, it's a trip up to what country they like the best.

Most loved England, while others found Paris more to their liking, despite the city's hectic streets.

"You had to watch how you crossed the streets. The drivers there have the right-of-way," said Miss Poirier.

But, says Miss Landberg, "if you speak French, it's [Paris] better."

The students also kept an eye on the latest fashions and found that "people in it" and "you can wear anything in Paris and get away with it."

During their trip, the students tried to experience as much as they could, trying different kinds of food, looking out of the way of picturesque, and learning up on their French.

"We were tired all the time, but it was great," they say. The trip's value "was a lifetime in 10 days."

Uniform bills to be enforced

Transport carriers and shippers will be required to begin using a uniform general freight bill of lading for all shipments as of July 1. Transportation minister Henry Kroeger announced recently.

The provincial Motor Transport Board passed a regulation outlining the content and terms and conditions of a Canada-wide uniform freight bill of lading.

In January, 1958, following agreement with the other provinces and territories. However, enforcement of the new regulations has been delayed until July 1, in order for carriers and shippers to familiarize themselves with the bill of lading.

After July 1, all bills of lading must conform to the standard format and conditions of carriage as stipulated by the regulation.

Breton students re-enact pioneer school days

By Della Loran

With all the modern conveniences of the classroom that we take for granted, a step back in time is usually a bounding and eye-opening experience.

It is was for the Grade 7 class at the Breton School last week, as they remodelled their room in a typical 1905 school.

Using antique furniture gathered from area farmers, and making use of "old" equipment when necessary, the students in Mrs. Olga Bender's class spent Education Week learning how their grandfathers and grandmothers spent with the daily round of the three R's.

And they didn't only have to learn the three R's. Patching and mending, chopping wood for the old pot-bellied stove, and washing dishes were all part of the regular duties for the students of yesterday.

As the routine then was different from now, so too was the equipment suited out to rugged students.

While the trip to the principal's office struck fear into the hearts of all, a spot on the stool wearing the dinner cap was equally frightful, as was the period spent standing, nose against the wall or blackboard, presumably effective on children who constantly spoke out of turn or otherwise disrupted the class.

For a week, the modern students put away their pencils and papers, working instead with the broom, stick pin, chalk and slate.

With no opportunity to correct mistakes with the pen, the students worked carefully so their penmanship, painstakingly learning how to write all over again, this time without mistakes.

Much and spelling lessons were practiced on the slate, rubbing each previous lesson out before moving on to the next one.

Major deck repairs of bridges on Highway 2 at Leduc will be commencing today (Wednesday). Detouring of the country in this bridge deck over Highway 28 and the CPR line at Leduc has reached the advanced stage and repairs work cannot be delayed. Bridge work is expected to be completed in two months.

Alberta Transportation announced last week that traffic will be accommodated through the construction zone by means of single lanes in the northbound and southbound directions. The speed limit will be reduced to 40 km. h. to this zone. It is expected that only minor delays and inconveniences will be experienced.

Washing clothes the hard way was just one of the activities completed by Eldorado School students during Education Week.

'No parking' sign request not granted by council

A 68-year-old widow, who walks with the help of a crutch, was told by Drayton Valley Town Council Tuesday that a No Parking sign in front of her house at 4609 80 Avenue would not afford her special privilege because such a restriction would apply to everybody.

Mrs. Eleanor Colby requested council to install a No Parking sign "slightly larger than a car's possible," so that her relatives could park their vehicles while visiting her. Such a sign would also ensure that she could be "picked up by a taxi," Mrs. Colby said.

She also complained to council about the condition of the sidewalk in front of her house. It has a drainage problem and is wider in the middle and narrower at the ends.

"I am a private individual," said Mrs. Colby. "I am not a taxpayer."

Some citizens would be installed to drain off the water, Mrs. Colby suggested.

Drayton Valley Town Council has requested for a No Parking sign, she said. "I have had a taxi from Town. I feel they (the Town) could bend a little bit. I am a widow. It's difficult for a woman to fight her battles. If the Town is not going to help me, will it help my house?"

Asked by Councilor Terry Wilgore whether she had submitted her house for sale, Mrs. Colby replied: "I haven't advertised my house for sale. I love it. I don't want to move."

Town manager William Johnson told Mrs. Colby the Town could not put up the No Parking sign just for her because the restriction would have to apply to everybody, and that no vehicle is allowed to block any driveway.

"If the no parking sign prevents my family from parking, then it will not help me at all," said Mrs. Colby.

Mayor Morris LaBrecque said something should be done about the drainage problem before winter comes. She also advised Mrs. Colby to phone the bylaw enforcement officer if vehicles are parked in the alley.

"Thank you for advising me, anyway," said Mrs. Colby to council. "But if you could do something about the drainage, it will be wonderful."

"I am a taxpayer. There is nothing left for me except playing bridge," Council directed the public works department to investigate the drainage problem.

"The sidewalk seems to be common to both," said Councilor Jeanette Vetter.

Consumers want return of corporate tax rebate

Alberta's communities are suggesting the federal government reconsider its plans to re-introduce a discriminatory taxation scheme that affects primarily Albertans, said Calgary Power Ltd. in a press release.

Customers of Calgary Power Ltd. began paying higher utility bills issued April 1 after Ottawa decided to reduce the utility's corporate income tax rebate to 50 per cent from 80 per cent.

More than 17 municipal councils in communities served by Calgary Power have already passed resolutions condemning the federal move as discriminatory to Albertans, the press release said.

Most of the other provinces are served by government-owned utilities which do not pay taxes to Ottawa.

The 50 per cent rebate was established in 1966 to stimulate tax distribution between the customers of private and public utilities.

Calgary Power finance vice-president E.G. Schaefer says he is pleased at the response to protest this selectively discriminating energy sales tax.

"I suspect Ottawa believes many Albertans do not appreciate details of tax transfers and therefore would not vote a protest. But there is a principle at stake here. All Canadians are entitled to equal treatment under federal tax laws. If Ottawa needs the $3 billion, perhaps they should equally tax the government-owned utilities in other provinces," said Mr. Schaefer.

"Their intentions are clear, however, since they have already held back some of the funds normally related, and we have been forced to adjust our customers' accounts beginning with the April 1 billing."

Seniors field questions about 'the good old days'

By Thierry Kline
Six Drayton Valley seniors went back to school April 28.

And they discovered education has undergone some changes since the 'good old days.'

Margaret Westlund, Harry Tweedie, Penny Davey, Annie Lock, Amy Isahager and Mrs. G. Stornes, all of the Wainwright Way, Alberta, spent an hour at Elementary 8 School fielding questions from inquisitive Grade 5 and 6 students.

Questions ranged from "what games did you play?" to "did you date?" and "how much money did you have?"

"The last query brought a laugh from Mrs. Stornes. 'We were lucky to have a nickel to buy a piece of gum,'

Children, however, could save some spending money by taking part in picnic races. Fifteen cents was awarded to the first place winner, 10 cents went to the second place runner, and five cents was the reward for the third place participant.

But, says Mrs. Stornes,

Mrs. G. Stornes.

"We'd have to run the hell if we wanted to get any money."

"The 78-year-old senior citizen says during her school days, students had to 'make their own fun. My fun was all outside.'"

Education consisted mostly of pass-the-hot-donut, hidden words, and free pinpoints with spin rotors on the side.

At one such picnic, a man won a game called 'Honey, Honey' which was all about...

ous were called full houses then, gambled Mrs. Stornes. When school students were not playing hopscotch, lot and games, they were at work on their reading, geography, history and grammar.

"We did an awful lot of marching. They (teachers) would watch to see if you knew your right foot from your left."

School, which had high teacher turnover rates (one to three years), was not all fun and games.

Mrs. Stornes can remember her incident when she and eight fellow classmates "got a licking. My hands were swollen to the size of...

go to school for three days. But also take a lot of punishment. Mrs. Stornes...

used to walk 4 km to school from her home about 10 km north of Wainwright by Hoadley. When the weather was cold, she wrapped her feet and legs in grassy mats to keep them from freezing.

Chicks, too, were converted from male-to-female bags and other cases. "They (kids) didn't don't know half of what it was like then," says Mrs. Stornes.

"Children don't realize how hard it was to manage." The pioneers got along without such things as refrigerators, and money. "We didn't know there was anything better."

But Mrs. Stornes thinks the youth of yesterday had more fun than today's. "Everything is all 'money now'."

That's our business

Upholsterer serves an economic need

By Richard Liss

During his 11 years as an upholsterer, Don Parvaneau has observed a trend which indicates the changing needs of his customers.

When he started his business in 1969, Mr. Parvaneau said Saturday, "It was just a hobby." He was upholstering furniture for antique collectors.

Don Parvaneau

Today most of his customers are people who try to beat the high cost of new furniture.

Instead of buying custom-made (in the volume and fashion of the antique furniture collector, Mr. Parvaneau finds himself playing an economic role in the area of price-conscious consumers.

Of late he has also been dealing with a new class of customers.

"They are young," Mr. Parvaneau says, "and they come to have their truck and car seats upholstered."

Mr. Parvaneau of Drayton Valley says he also repairs motorcycle cushions and makes drapes.

Many of his customers are "retirees," Mr. Parvaneau says, and they are from as far away as Fort McMurray, Edmonton, Red Deer and Lethbridge.

"Twenty-five per cent of his business is derived from buying and upholstering new furniture for sale."

"I take two percent of his business to upholster a chair," Mr. Parvaneau says.

The French colonial and "high back" styles are now back in fashion, Mr. Parvaneau contends. And the Scandinavian style is being popularized.

Commenting on the breadth of his customers, Mr. Parvaneau says, "They are plain old-white, light brown and red, although floral patterns and plaids are also popular."

A good piece of furniture must have a good solid frame without too many spacers, Mr. Parvaneau says. A frame which has to move will not be a good-looking one, he adds.

Before starting his upholstery business, Mr. Parvaneau was working in a hotel hotel and in his 18th year with the company he was transferred to Owen Sound to manage the hotel hotel there.

"When I was working for the hotel, I wasn't always home. And I had a family of seven. I thought to myself: I'll start an upholstery shop. Even then I knew quite a lot about fabric and I was handy with sewing machines."

After a short upholstery career in Edmonton, he returned to Drayton Valley in 1969 to set up a shop in the basement of a hotel hotel.

While establishing his business, he was working part-time in the lounge of the hotel for which he worked.

"We used to pick up and deliver furniture, but we have not done that because most of the people were not at home. Now we provide the service only for people who do not have vehicles."

On two occasions, Mr. Parvaneau had to re-upholster chairs for two couples because their cats had not liked the color of the fabric chosen by their husbands.

This taught Mr. Parvaneau a lesson. Now his policy is that a couple should discuss the fabric choice before placing any order.

Typical requests occasionally crop up, says Mr. Parvaneau. Once he was asked to add more springs to the base of a chair. People would like him to reinforce their new furniture with "additional legs and springs."

Springing is the best period for upholstering truck and car seats, Mr. Parvaneau says, but furniture upholstery is "an all year round business."

out our way

by Wendy Thomson

Today is Wednesday. It's my column-writing day. Today is also the day I catch up on the housework I haven't got done because I've spent the last two days in Drayton, and it's the day I try to get ahead with housework because I won't be home much for the next four days, either.

And wouldn't you know it would be today that I'd have to put on a slipper and develop a crick in my back?

I must say it makes the day a challenge as I seem to be able to get halfway through something before I finish, and followed it down.

(By more convenient means), and get the clothes into the washing machine in a series of explosive bursts.

Coming back upstairs was a different matter. After a few false starts, I managed to step on the stairs and the same monstrous spider.

There was a bit of a problem of the top, though. I couldn't quite find either the nough or the right back angle to get onto my feet without assistance and ended up crawling into the bedroom, on hands and knees, then manouvered up the bed and upright.

Much the same happened when, without thinking, I sat down in a boarding chair. That's hard enough for a person to get out of when all the furniture is so impaired. With a crick in the back, it seems a person must roll out of it onto the floor, so the crawling let until the run into a piece of furniture or somebody's legs (which ever comes first), then hitch her way up whichever is handy.

I have an appointment with the chiropractor in a few hours, and so can't let this be the last of it. I'm typing this standing up, on top of the toaster (the typewriter, not me).

It's rather awkward and a little painful, so the week there wasn't too much of a problem of the top, though, and that's the reason why.

Act redefines trade schools

The Government of Alberta is Thursday proclaimed the Private Vocational Schools Act. It replaces the Trade Schools Regulations Act which had been in effect since 1965.

In announcing the proclamation, Alberta Advanced Education and Manpower Minister Jim Horne said: "The ultimate objective is to ensure the continued operation of private vocational schools serving and training students for participation in the work force as we move into the '90s."

The new act will include "trade schools" to include all vocationally related schools which will allow for constant regulation of private career post-secondary schools. It will provide greater consumer protection for Albertans through an improved system of inspection, to help prevent unsatisfactory schools from operating.

The act calls for the establishment of a Private Vocational Schools Council to advise the minister. The council will have approval expensive or denial of license. A director will be appointed to administer the act and will be given authority to monitor, regulate and license private vocational schools.

Currently there are more than 60 private vocational schools in Alberta. Fourteen of these offer beauty treatment.

There are 12 other business education, eight other law accounting and the rest other various courses from commercial flight training, driver training to the skills training and include both correspondence and classroom instruction.

"I believe strongly in the private enterprise sector of the province. There is a valid and useful role to be played by the private vocational schools. I am confident this act will ensure the schools and their operators, as well as the students, benefit from increased recognition and higher standards," Mr. Horne concluded.

New health unit office opens

On April 26 it was my privilege to participate in the official ribbon-cutting ceremony at the official opening of the new Westlake Health Unit office in Westlake.

The health unit provides a medical service to local residents. The Westlake Health Unit has consistently improved this service since its establishment in 1975.

On April 26, during the opening ceremony, the Minister of Health and Family Services announced plans for a new health unit in Westlake. The unit will be located on the corner of 10th and 11th Aves. in Westlake.

Initiatives taken to boost housing starts

By Geoff White

Now efforts to increase housing supply in the province have finally been announced after months of government promises.

Chief among the new initiatives is a tax credit for high-income earners who can afford to pay their money into apartment and condominium construction.

Valued this year at $25 million, the tax credit will replace a federal capital cost allowance which was cancelled last year and which the province claimed was a significant factor in guaranteeing new housing starts in Alberta.

Apartment and condominium developers will be able to claim five per cent of their investment in new construction as a tax credit.

Chase and Leveson are being encouraged to speed up their multimillion-dollar development approval processes with the promise of grants from the government.

If a town can bring on more housing this year than the average of the last three years, it will be eligible for $2,500 grants. But even if it achieves only half the level of new construction of medium and high-density housing it will receive $1,000 grants.

The government has also promised additional aid for non-profit housing and increased the senior citizens' rental assistance tax credit to $1,000 from $500.

The new housing initiative will take place in conjunction with $500 million in programs previously announced by the government.

Through the Alberta Home Mortgage Corporation, the government is helping to finance $300 million in programs to help low-income families, many of which will have been cancelled by the government. The government is helping all the housing measures will help towards an estimated 10,000 new homes in Alberta this year.

Provincial Treasurer Len Hyndman noted in the budget that housing starts declined from a current high of 64,000 in 1975 to 40,000 last year.

And the government was expecting a further fall with a forecast of 35,000 starts in 1980. The federal withdrawal of the capital cost allowance, even with the announced housing plan, leaving Mr. Hyndman says that the province's housing starts in 1980 will be 40,000.

Mr. Hyndman said Alberta (30 million), British Columbia (25 million), and Saskatchewan (15 million), have a combined surplus which would amount to one per cent of the national total of approximately $13 billion.

The western provinces now represent the majority of the Canadian economy. Yet in the end, we'll have to pay for their rigidity and short-sightedness.

He said the provinces have forgotten that the west was once a land, hungry, people

Education Week:

In the classrooms of old, masahopini resulted in a spell with the dance cap, as the student in Mrs. Olga Reade's Grade 7 class at Breton found out.

Some of the Eldorado School students found the sheep shearing exhibition to be a little hard on their noses.

One of Education Week's goals was to acquaint school children with new experiences—such as the sheep shearing exhibition was for many.

A learning experience

At Breton school, Mrs. Olga Reade's Grade 7 class spent the week in a 1905-era classroom, practicing penmanship with caligraphy pen.

The cowboys from the old west came crawling out of the woodwork Friday as Eldorado School hosted a pioneer dress-up day.

Most of the Eldorado School students found a lesson in making butter to be a new experience.

In days gone by, much lessons were done on a slate, as this Grade 7 student at Breton school demonstrates.

Tenancy disputes to courts

Tenants and landlords will now be able to seek tenancy remedies directly through the Provincial Court of Alberta.

With the proclamation on May 1, 1980 of Part 6 of the Landlord and Tenant Act, 1979, landlords and tenants will be able to litigate claims by themselves in the provincial courts. Previously, remedies could only be obtained through the Court of Queen's Bench.

John Enslin, minister of Alberta Consumer and Corporate Affairs, noted the proclamation of the Act as beneficial to both tenants and landlords.

"It should promote a smoother, speedier and less costly process for determining tenancy disputes."

Under the newly proclaimed part of the Act, the provincial court may give an order for possession of residential premises where the rent is not more than $600 a month and where the term of the tenancy is for not more than three years.

Persons explaining how a landlord or tenant may obtain a ruling will be available from provincial services throughout the province.

Shell plans plant

Shell Canada has announced plans to construct a new manufacturing facility in Calgary at an estimated cost of $17.5 million.

It will be the only large scale green glass unit of its kind in the world. The plant is to be located on the site where a bulk lubricant facility is currently under construction.

The new plant will produce industrial and consumer products, including its design, will be an extension of the existing plant.

Developed by Shell Canada researchers. The products are formulated to withstand the Canadian climate.

Capable of producing up to 10 million pounds of green glass per year, the plant will be expanded in the future.

Construction, scheduled for completion in 1981, is subject to government and regulatory agency approvals. A project application will be submitted to the City of Calgary shortly.

Shell Canada currently possesses large-scale green glass as a by-product.

Cadets have busy schedule

By Dorothy Gosselin

With the month of May signifying the end of cadet activities for this year, members of the Breton Cadet Corps are busy taking in the spring program. April 11, 18 and 19 was command week for the Gold Star units of Alberta and Northwest Territories. The top scorer in this competition was a Breton cadet, Paul Weymouth, who won a job to the United Kingdom in April, 1981. April 26 was helicopter day at Breton. A Chinook helicopter from CF95 Edmonton came to Breton to give the cadets an aerial view of their community. Through the air work "week", the cadets enjoyed looking at their homes from the inside and got a different perspective of the community.

May 9 the cadets participated in a Change of Command parade at their affiliated unit, the 28th Field Artillery Regiment in Elkton.

May 6 was graduation day for the cadets who spent the summer. The Lieutenant-Commander of Alberta, Frank Lynch-Stanless, took the salute at this function. The annual inspection concluded cadet parades for the year.

This year however, a number of functions, largely in the entertainment area, will carry on for the month. On May 11, the cadets will attend the Calgary Trixie at the Edmonton Coliseum. The public is invited to this show.

Two cadets will go to meet Patsy Philby in Calgary on May 11. The remainder of May 20 will visit up the year with a camping and canoeing trip down the North Saskatchewan River.

'Spit and polish'

Cadets to stage tattoo

Long number of training at individual corps headquarters throughout north-west Alberta will reach a climax at Edmonton Coliseum on May 11 when teenagers from more than 40 units. Army and Air Force cadet corps join with tattoo "cadets" from Calgary in the 1980 Alberta Cadet Tattoo.

The spectacular salute to Alberta's 75th anniversary will be presided by a full Saturday of dress rehearsals as producer-director, Capt. Jack McDonald of Calgary integrates the individual segments into a last-minute, two-hour performance.

Wearing the colorful uniforms of their affiliated regiments and services, the young men and women will perform ceremonies not often seen outside major military bases.

They will also give glimpses of the cadet training that makes many young people in town proud in moments of emergency.

The youngsters who take part in parades, drills, band, the drum and pipe corps, and other instruments in the mounted bands have also spent many months at winter training, cross-country skiing, mountaineering, communications, teamwork and other aspects of western Canadian defence force training.

But on May 11 they will concentrate on "spit and polish," as they stage 1980's most spectacular salute to Alberta's 75th anniversary.

Students examine model rocketry

By Paul Weymouth

On April 18 the Breton IS 10 class took a short trip to the heavy farm to observe Brian Inge's hobby of model rocketry.

With Brian prepared the first rocket for takeoff, Mr. Gosselin, the rest of the class on hand to witness the height of a rocket. Brian then explained the basic principles involved in model rocketry and the class prepared for the launch.

Out of three rockets, all made 3 feet in the air. The first launched about one-half mile from the launch site and provided a fair amount of search for the majority of the class. Brian then decided it would be wise to place a smaller parachute in the next rocket to avoid possible loss. The wind also picked up slightly so it was decided to move the launch pad further from the trees.

The second rocket was as successful as the first. The rocket made it into the air, but the opening stuck yielded the parachute from the rocket, sending the rocket spinning to the ground and the parachute drifting away. Luckily, the rocket was caught before it crashed and landed, only minimal damage.

On the last launch, the rocket was again held in the launch pad. It crashed and landed, only minimal damage.

After a discussion to make minor improvements, Brian launched the third rocket. It should be noted that this rocket was of Brian's own design. The rocket reached a greater height than any previous rocket, but the parachute failed to open. The rocket then turned in mid-air and hit the ground at speeds in excess of 70 km/h, shattering down into pieces.

THE TOWN OF DRAYTON VALLEY

NOTICES AND INFORMATION

NOTICE OF PROPOSED LOCAL IMPROVEMENTS

Pursuant to the provisions of Section 153 of The Municipal Taxation Act, R.S.A. 1970, Public Notice is hereby given that the Council of the Town of Drayton Valley intends to undertake the construction of local improvements as hereinafter described, to be paid for by way of special frontage and frontage assessments of land rates per acre/decade as approved by Town Council at the locations hereinafter described.

Although section 147 of The Municipal Taxation Act states that the Council may impose a special frontage assessment according to the number of linear feet of the lands measured along the abutting portion of a uniform and equal rate per foot, the said section also states that where several parcels of land abut on the local improvements and some of them appear to call for smaller or larger proportion of the assessment an account of longer portion of the assessment on each parcel or share from the other parcels of land, such unequal portion of land may be assessed on having a smaller or larger number of feet abutting thereon than they actually have so that each parcel of land abutting on the local improvement will bear a fair and equitable proportion of the cost of the improvement.

Comme l'art 147 de la Loi sur l'évaluation des biens immobiliers stipule que les parcelles de terrain qui sont assujetties à une évaluation inégale en raison de leur longueur ou de leur largeur, il est possible d'évaluer ces parcelles de terrain en fonction du nombre de pieds qui leur donnent accès à l'amélioration.

The proposed local improvements are the construction of the following:

Rough going for asphalt board

By Robert Lin
 Operation of the Drayton Valley Asphalt Board has been trying but much about its two-member municipalities adopted different operating concepts two years ago.

What's wrong is the difference in philosophy adopted by Drayton Grove and Drayton Valley regarding operation of the board, says Councilor Terry McGraw.

"I've seen it," continues Councilor McGraw, "the Drayton Grove Council thinks the board should be operated as an independent business."

"Initially, the board is set up under the Municipal Act. At present there isn't too much friction between the two municipalities."

The current agreement would have expired next month, but it has been extended to Dec. 31 because of the strike situation in October.

Two years ago the Drayton Grove Council made some changes in the operational system of the board and stated that "the board should take over everything," says Councilor McGraw, who is Drayton Valley's appointee and vice-chairman of the board.

Until 1978 the board gave only estimates, Councilor McGraw says. Then Drayton Grove "turned around and put these estimates in the form of a contract," and said the board must buy its own gravel, Councilor McGraw continues.

Previously the two towns supplied gravel to the board, which would estimate the cost of asphalt.

In 1978 the board's estimate was $24,000 less than the actual cost. And instead of refunding Drayton Valley, the Drayton Grove Council sent the refund to the board which split it both ways.

Asked whether Drayton Valley could consider getting the refund, Councilor McGraw says: "I doubt it. Technically, it was the board's money."

Clearly it would be wrong to deny Drayton Valley the refund, Councilor McGraw adds.

A year ago, the two councils met to discuss the issue about which the Drayton Valley Council expressed concern. Drayton Valley also extended that since it did not charge the board for engineering services provided, Drayton Grove should not charge the board for engineering services rendered.

It is worthwhile to operate the plant jointly with Drayton Grove?

"It all depends on the co-operation between the two towns," says Councilor McGraw.

Established in 1975, the four-member board is equally represented by the two municipalities. Councilor John Bussan is the other Drayton appointee. Councilor Robert Lang is the alternate board member representing Drayton.

"Establishing construction time was a big thing," says Councilor McGraw. But "there is quite a difference" when it comes to conducting "a private enterprise under the Municipal Act," Councilor McGraw states.

Drayton Grove then is private enterprise to undertake construction. In Drayton there isn't any, Councilor McGraw says.

"This puts the board in an awkward position. In Drayton we feel obligated to do work for private developers. Normally we feel obligated to do the private work because of the cost."

Last year the board made a $40,000 profit, says Councilor McGraw, the 1978 board chairman.

Pitching in

Last week was Pitch in Alberta Week, a time for everyone to get involved in cleaning up Alberta. These students from St. Anthony's school were a few of the hundreds of school students from Drayton Valley pitching in to make the town look a little better.

Balloons found far away

By Henry Klade
 They launched their balloons into the air, and where they fell they knew not where.

While that may be true of most of the 500 balloons launched by the Drayton Valley School students last October, April 28 to mark the beginning of Blowing Rock, at least eight have popped down to earth again in various parts of Alberta.

Vice-principal Russ Brown says the school has received letters from Albertans who discovered the balloons-filled balloons in such areas as Banff, Bridge, Medicine Hat, Wetlock, Oxbow, Barrhead and Pelly.

The students launched the balloons, which had tags containing the school's name, to return them to the children, not a few were replied to by the children.

Mr. Brown said Monday that the school is happy to get a few more replies to its balloons super.

By Henry Klade
 "Really surprised" Mr. Brown said.

This particular balloon was a few days old and was released at 11 a.m. The child found it 15 km northwest of Banff in the Banff district at 8:15 the same day.

But he doubts the balloons will have travelled any farther, than that because oxygen and other heavy gases will have replaced the steadily escaping helium through diffusion.

Several other balloons were found closer to home in Drayton Valley, and they probably weren't able to make as long a journey because "they just weren't light enough to carry them that distance."

Potters may have place to call home

Recreation director Ron Bentley says she has "mixed feelings" about the referendum, but says the best area is town is east of the swimming pool in Rotary Park subject to "pretty stringent conditions."

However, which would include siting and wiring, will be "extensive" and would cost approximately $10,000, and the club hasn't indicated where that money is coming from, she said.

The club has applied for funding under the 1975 anniversary grant program, but its decision has been tabled so far.

Board member Russ Brown, said the club, which has been working to find accommodation since last June, is "confused" and "they don't know what to do."

"I wonder what other alternatives there are. They have talked about looking outside Drayton Valley, but I don't know how feasible that's going to be."

The 25-member club is currently situated in a modest classroom at Frank Madden High School (FMHS), but full-time year use of the room this year has restricted the club to one full day on weekends only.

Although FMHS would accommodate the group next year, the club would not be able to increase membership, or hold adult and children classes.

The Club of Potters would own the陶器, but will give it to the Rotary Club if a decision can be made by June. "The club needs members from the town as it is an important element," they need to know if the town can help them in any way," Mr. Brown said.

The club and/or council may reject the board proposal, but "I want to show them (Rotary Club) in order the next year," said Mr. Brown.
